Think you might want to pursue a PhD in Psychology (including Clinical, Cognitive, Counseling, Developmental, Industrial/Organizational, Neuroscience, or Social) but aren’t sure how to make it happen?

Are you interested in creating more diversity among psychologists and bringing the perspectives of diverse communities to improve the practice and research of psychology?

Then you should apply for this Spring semester’s
ENTER THE PHD
workshop (scheduled for April 12, 2019)
sponsored by the Department of Psychology and the Graduate School.

To apply, please fill out the application form at https://goo.gl/forms/cAF4uHNVuI5rkdY83. The deadline to apply is Monday, February 11th, but we welcome applications before that date. If you have any questions before applying, please email Dr. Wessel at jwessel@umd.edu.

The Enter the PhD Workshop is geared toward [current freshman or sophomore] psychology majors and will answer questions such as:

- Why should I consider a doctoral degree (PhD) in psychology?
- What are the differences between a master’s degree and a doctoral degree in psychology?
- What are the different career paths available to those who earn a PhD in psychology?
- What are the different research areas of psychology?
- What is life as a psychology graduate student really like?
- What steps can I start taking now to be a desirable candidate for psychology PhD programs?
- … and any questions you have that are not on this

This workshop is organized by the Department of Psychology’s Diversity Committee as part of our effort to increase graduate study opportunities for students from groups that are underrepresented in the field of psychology.

We are especially interested in applicants who identify with historically underrepresented racial/ethnic minority groups and/or who are the first in their family to go to college.

However, all students who are committed to strengthening psychology by increasing diversity and inclusion in the field will receive serious consideration.